Introduction

The topic of the cloud, which has since become a bit of a dirty word in the IT industry, will remain with us for the next few years. I myself was gripped by the topic years ago. Starting in IT in the area of consulting and then helping to set up and operate a managed service provider, I quickly became a big proponent of the flexibility and service diversity that the public cloud can offer us. There are few areas in IT that are more in demand right now than the cloud. Any company that decides to make the move can't avoid updating its own resources due to the lack of resources.

AWS, which I consider to be one of the leading providers in the public cloud segment, has also experienced a huge upswing in Switzerland. When I remember the time when customers said I wanted to sell books and compare it with today's situation, I always smile. For me an advantage, for some a disadvantage is the fast pace of this industry. We sometimes have up to four new announcements per day. The half-life of knowledge is therefore very short. Despite the young training program, the AWS Training Team manages to keep the courses up to date at an incredible pace. As the first trainer in Switzerland and one of the first squad worldwide, I still remember AWS trainer approvals by a single person. A trainer list worldwide that fit on one A4 page. And today, a short time later, there is an extremely professional training and content team that consults with the trainers on a weekly basis and puts feedback into practice very quickly. So we have our finger on the pulse.

In the role as lead trainer, I would like to draw you into the spell of AWS together with Fast Lane. Prepare your company and you as an employee for the demands of the next few years. Experience courses that are peppered with real-life experience. Trainers who are hand-picked, have to prove and hold their own in the field every day! Join the club of IT metrologists. So that your company and also you do not get wet in stormy times.
